Fire Prevention and Civil Defense Go Hand in Hand

Fire prevention is an important part of civil defense. If an enemy attacks this country, his bombs, whether they be atomic, or explosive, or incendiary, will cause more damage than they will by blast. Hence, anything done to make it hard for fires to start is a step towards preparing your community to protect itself if war comes.

Americans Are Meat-Conscious

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Meat has moved from America's dinner table into the press, politics and public consciousness.

Among the best fed people in the world, the average home town dweller eats about 148 pounds of red meat a year. If he is in uniform, he may expect nearly four-fifths of a pound a day or more than a pound if he is in beef, 46 per cent in pork, and the rest in lamb and mutton.

In the early days, the average man and woman ate an estimated 200 pounds of meat a year, in the form of bacon, chops, ham and etc. Beef did not become an established part of American meat habits until after the Civil War.
